"Mysterious Mr. Mason" Will Be In Woodhull High Monday

Three-act comedy from pen of Robert M. Sand is next Collins Festival offering — P. T. A. group sponsoring production.

The "Mysterious Mr. Mason" is coming to town. So announces the Collins Management Services who are directing the current Entertainment Festival.

Just who he is, what he wants or what to do about him remains an unknown factor until the final scene of the three-act comedy with which the Collins company closes this season's series.

Robert Morrill Sand, author of "Cricket", "Paupers and Pews" and other former Collins offerings also is the author of "The Mysterious Mr. Mason". It goes without saying therefore that the theme of the piece is serious and purposeful, although the story unfolds through a series of unique situations to which the strange personage known as Mr. Mason holds the key.

Interest arises from the marital difficulties of Ken and Sally Carson, in whose New York apartment the entire action takes place. Ken expects to make a million dollars almost any day, and is so intent upon it that he forgets temporarily the more important matters that make up the sum total of joyful living. Sally, who loves gaiety, hopes he will succeed but is sure he won't and grows restless under her husband's neglect. Marcus Horne enters the picture as a stock promoter who tries to use Ken as a stooge in putting over a gigantic stock swindle. He might have succeeded had it not been for the old fashioned common sense of Mrs. Abigail Brown, Sally's mother, who comes to visit them from her rural home in Oklahoma. But even Mrs. Brown might have failed to save the Carson home had it not been for the strange arrival of the Mysterious Mr. Mason who bobs up at the most unexpected times and places and who, until the end of the piece keeps everybody guessing as to whether he is friend or foe.

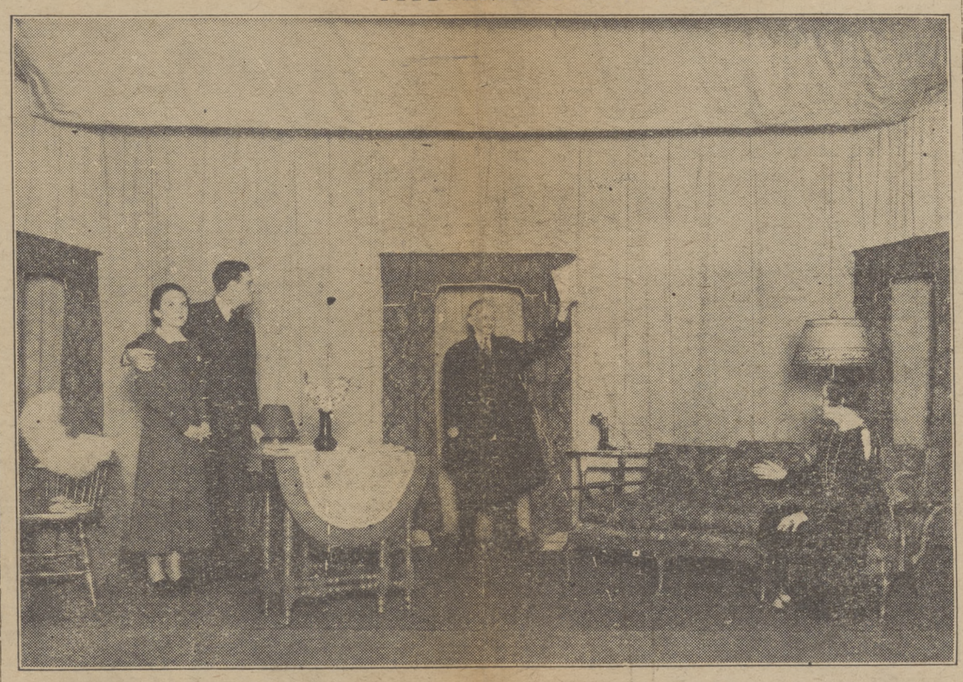
Rapid action, smart lines, and comedy situations sustain the play throughout the four scenes in which it is presented. The cast has been selected with great care and competently directed. Collins Management Services believe they have achieved another signal success in the presentation of "The Mysterious Mr. Mason".

40 and 8 Veterans Meet In Addison Dec. 5

Members of the 40 and 8 of Steuben County will be guests of the Addison group at a "promenade" to be held here December 5. There will be a dinner in the Eagle Hotel with county officers in charge. Invitations have been extended to state officers to participate and exceptances have been received at county headquarters, assuring one of the largest meetings of the fall and winter season.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cussins with children Hilda, Velma, Iwilda and Henry spent the last of the week with relatives in Redcliffe, Pa.

"MYSTERIOUS MR. MASON"



The Casford Players Will Present Well Known Three-act Comedy in Woodhull High Auditorium Monday Night.

Mrs. Harold Smith Retires From Addison Girl Scout Leadership

Captain of local youth organization resigns after two years of leadership and years of activity in troop affairs — Committee Women tender her a dinner and present gift—No successor has been chosen.

Mrs. Harold Smith, retiring leader of the Girl Scout Troop in Addison was the guest of honor at a dinner Monday night in the home of Mrs. Matthew Whitmore. The affair was in the nature of a picnic dinner.

Mrs. Smith has been captain of the troop for the past two years and prior to that had served as junior leader. It has been under her administration that the Addison Girl Scout troop has become one of the leading troops in Steuben County. She has assured the leaders that she will serve until the reorganization of the troop is completed.

The dinner was tendered by members of the troop committee. Those present in addition to the guest and hostess were: Mrs. Irving Gladstone, chairman of the troop committee, Mrs. Bernard Wilson, Miss Jeannette Dykins, Mrs. Peter Laffkas, Mrs. Dixon Curtis, Mrs. Lynn Taylor and Mrs. L. E. Handy, the last named two being former troop committee members when Mrs. Smith entered the troop leadership field. Troop committee members absent were Mrs. Kenneth Armstrong and Mrs. Hugh Varn.

Mrs. Smith was presented a gift by the committeewomen in appreciation of her work on behalf of the girls in the troop. An informal program was conducted after the dinner. This in turn was followed by a business meeting of the committeewomen at which plans for future activities were formed.

Funeral for Glenn Beers Held Sunday

Many friends from Addison attended funeral services for the late Glenn Beers 19, who was killed in a motor mishap early last Thursday morning near Hammondsport.

Funeral services were held from the home of his mother Mrs. Herbert J. Seeley at Academy Corners, at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon and were largely attended. Fellow employes in the Pepper Bakery attended in a body. The floral tributes were profuse and beautiful attesting to the popularity of the unfortunate young man. The Rev. Webster, pastor of the Knoxville, M. E. Church officiated and burial was made in Woods Corners cemetery.

Bearers were school and work companions and included Franklyn Butler, Harry Chase, Donald Burlingame, Richard Dininny, Arnold Gable and Raymond Hargrave.

Mr. Beers was killed when his motor car struck a bridge near Hammondsport. He was not driving the car at the time of the accident. Defective steering apparatus is believed to have caused the car to veer into the bridge. The car is a total wreck.

Glenn Beers was born at Woods Corners, April 1, 1918 the son of the late Coral and Goldie Lemunyan Beers. He attended school in that district and upon completion of his studies there, entered Addison High School, graduating with the class of 1934. While in high school Glenn was active in athletics and in the Future Farmer organization and was a popular member of the student body. Following his graduation he worked in the local A & P store where he was assistant manager. Relinquishing this position he had for more than a year been engaged as driver of a bread truck for the Pep-O Bakery.

Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Herbert J. Seeley of Academy Corners; four brothers, Burdette of Addison, Donald and Ray at home and Wendell of Woods Corners, one sister, Alberta of Sayre; two grandmothers, Mrs. Ann Beers of Woods Corners and Mrs. Mary Lemunyan, Addison.

Sea Gulls Are Back in Town

The two sea gulls are back in town after a summer spent at the shore. It is a question whether these two gulls are the same who come to Addison every winter and make their home here, but it is certain that at least two may be seen in this vicinity beginning in the middle of each November and continuing here until March or April of each year for the past few years. They make their home near the mouth of the Tuscarora Creek where it empties into the Canisteo River. This year the steam shovel has widened the mouth of the creek giving them a wider area in which to work.

Mr. and Mrs. Galen Brownell and Mrs. Ella Odle of Osceola called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Sutliff Sunday.

Steuben Street Resident Objects to Junk Dumping

Harold Moore, Steuben street, spent considerable time clearing away the debris from his property at the northwest corner of Steuben and the B. & O. tracks. It had been a public dumping ground for several years. However it has recently become a place of beauty. Shrubbery has been cleared, the junk carted away and grass and flowers planted in the vicinity.

However, during the past few weeks, it has been noticed that people are dumping bottles, fruit cans and garbage on the spot. This is a violation of the local health laws and must be prohibited. Some people have been seen doing this and Chief Bovee is issuing a warning against this practice or action will have to be taken.

PARTY FOR ALWYNNE ARNOLD

Games and stunts were enjoyed and refreshments were served to Shirley Bebout, Anne Morris, Joyce Jones, Mary Agnes Whitford, Alwynne Arnold and Alice Barr.

Card Party Nets Good Sum for St. Catherine's

Women of the Catholic Daughters and men of St. Catherine's Church sponsored a card party and dance in the church hall Monday night. There were forty tables of bridge, euchre, pinochle, rummy and 500 players. This was one of the largest card parties sponsored by the combined group in several months.

Prizes were awarded as follows: Bridge, Mrs. George Freeman and Wilfred Miller; 500, Mrs. Catherine Durkin and Earl Wilson; euchre, Mrs. William Gage and Thomas McTamney; rummy, Miss Doris Rice and Charles Robena. Hugh Cunningham, Corning, was awarded a turkey. Refreshments were served by the ladies of the club.

Mrs. Dan J. Colbert headed the committee for the women and Lawrence Hanrahan was in charge for the men. Money raised from the card party will be used for meeting expenses of repairing the parish house and church. Music for an informal program of dancing was played by the Reagan Brothers, Rathbone.

CARD CLUB MEETS

Mrs. C. E. Benedict entertained members of the Rebekah Card Club and friends at her home Friday. Honors were awarded Mrs Frank Hess and Mrs. Bert Harry.

Others present were Mrs. James Erwin, Mrs. Julia Smith, Mrs. Josephine Clark, Mrs. George Ammerman, Mrs. Anna Raplee, Mrs. Leo Sharpe, Mrs. Llewellyn Robbins and Mrs. Lawrence Benedict.

The next meeting of the group will be held at the home of Mrs. Bert Harry.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carpenter spent the week-end in Ithaca.

Mrs. Babcock Honored At Surprise Party

Mrs. J. Wesley Babcock was given a pleasant surprise by friends and neighbors who gathered at her home last week. She was presented with many attractive gifts.

Refreshments were served following a few social hours.

Those present were: Mrs. Elwyn Ten Broeck, Mrs. Maurice Williams, Mrs. Elwyn Williams, and daughter Susanne, Mrs. Julius Mason and son David, Mrs. Robert Mason, Mrs. George Symonds, Mrs. Earl Peters, Mrs. Bernard Dougherty, Mrs. C. Davis and children David and Sally Ann, Mrs. William A. Paul, Mrs. Erle Beatty, Mrs. Curtis Oakley Mrs. Parke Boyd, Mrs. Lorenzo Dyer, Mrs. Henry Carpenter, Mrs. Darwin Williams, and daughter Janet, Mrs. Paul Symonds and daughter Margaret, Miss Mary Hoar, Mrs. J. Williard Gossner, Mrs. Ernest Husted, Mrs. Merwin Fuller, children Ann and Alfred, Mrs. Wallace Williams, Mrs. Afton Freeland, Mrs. Minnie Cilley Mrs. Simpson, and the complimented guest, Mrs. Babcock.

Attorneys Must File Briefs by December 4 in Van Cise Case

Briefs must be filed by December 4 by attorneys for the prosecution and defense in the trial of the alleged murders of the Van Cise brothers in Beeman Hollow. The briefs are relative to free three defendants now being held on charges of having committed this murder. Those being held are Anthony Mistretta and Bartolo Guccia, Endicott, and James Ross, Corning. District Attorney George A. King states he has new evidence which he will present. The trio were freed by a jury in the slaying of one of the Van Cise Brothers and hence are seeking writs to free them on charges arising from the death of the second aged recluse.

WOMEN'S AUXILIARY MEETS

The women of the Auxiliary of the Chapel of the Redeemer met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Albert H. Head. Preliminary plans were made for the bake sale held Saturday and announcement of past activities was given.

Mrs. Lewis Black and Miss Dorothy Paul were in Addison Saturday.

Hi-Lights and Shadows of the Week's News

Senator Vandenberg, Republican of Michigan challenged the Roosevelt administration Monday with a 10 point program designed to give business an honest chance for recovery. Vandenberg stated that "business must not be permitted to run the government, but unless it is allowed reasonable latitude to run itself free from an ambitious collectivism which creates more problems than it solves--prosperity will die on the vine."

Mr. and Mrs. Elon Symonds observed their thirtieth wedding aniversary at their home in Jasper Friday evening. Mr. and Mrs. Symonds were presented a lamp from their friends.

Those attending from Woodhull were: Mr. and Mrs. Howard Symonds, daughters Esther and Kate, Mr. and Mrs. George Symonds, sons George Jr. and Edwin, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Symonds, children Dreda, Harold and Margaret Mr. and Mrs. Ray Symonds, Mr. and Mrs. Waldo Symonds, children Keith, Maurice and Irma, and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Heckman and son Robert.

OLIVER GRANT SHOT

Word has been received here of the accidental shooting of Oliver Grant of Sodus, grandson of Lester Gurnsey.

He with his brother Stanley had started hunting when Stanley fell and the gun discharged, striking Oliver in the abdomen.

He was taken to the hospital where it will be necessary for him to remain indefinitely. He is expected to recover if complications do not develop.

The Eastern Star realized about $19 from the rummage sale held Saturday.

Fire Siren Blows Several Minutes Friday Night

Volunteer firemen rushed about, many phone calls were made and many questions asked Friday night when the fire siren began blowing about six o'clock. There was no fire, either in the village or out of it. The mechanical apparatus operating the siren clogged causing the horn to stick in the open position and blow for several minutes. This was called a false alarm, the first here in many months.

LAST OF WASHINGTONS BORN AT MT. VERNON, DIES

Alexandria, Va. — Mrs. Eleanor Selden Washington Howard, 81, last of the Washington family born at Mount Vernon, died here yesterday. She was the great great grandniece of George Washington.

M. E. PRAYER SERVICE

Gillet Club Hears Talk On Newspaper Making

"The history of newswriting and advertising, newspaper censorship and other little known facts about newspapers and newspapermen", was the topic of a talk given before members of the Gillet Club Tuesday night by Harry Mullen of the Advertiser staff. Mrs. Marcia Chappel, presided.

This was the monthly meeting of the club. Mr. and Mrs. Jay Mose and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Magoon were in charge of the program and refreshments. Mrs. Irving Gladstone led the devotions.

Plans were made for a Christmas party Tuesday, December 21. Gifts will be brought for underprivileged children. Mrs. Stuart Bean and Mrs. Alice Breese will be in charge of food and Milton Crane and Charles Salerno will decorate a Christmas tree.

Jabe Johnson Well Coming in Wednesday

The Jabe Johnson well gave promise of being the 14th producer in the Woodhull field yesterday when a small flow of gas was struck under the cap-rock. Drillers immediately pulled their tools after hitting the production sand only a couple of times, a flow of about 100,000 feet starting from the hole. Dave Cunningham in charge of bringing in this well stated drilling would be resumed at midnight Tuesday and full production night be expected sometime this morning.

The well is owned by the John T. Cunningham Company and is located near the Henry Tubbs which came in about three weeks ago.

The Josie Lobeck, 13th well in the field blew itself in last week with a flow of 22 million feet. The Lobeck is located a short distance from the Herrington discovery well in an area already proven by former tests. It is a Hanley and Bird operation.

Belmont Quadrangle ceased drilling temporarily on the Leon Johnson well the first of the week to pull equipment out of the hole. The Johnson is the first well in the Woodhull field on which rotary equipment has been used for drilling in. For some unknown reason the rotary bit has not been cutting away the bottom of the hole, so drillers are pulling the drilling pipe to ascertain the difficulty.

The well will doubtless be finished by the last of this week.

Woodhull Scalps Knoxville Five

Butler led his 'Braves' into battle for the first time this year on the Woodhull court Thursday, November 18. Knoxville put up a stiff defense but again and again Butler put his men in position to score.

McGuire and Olin starred as forwards, backed by Hallett and Kilmer as guards and Butler as center.

Coach Davison was only forced to play a substitute once. He placed Jackson for McGuire, while McGuire changed with Hallett. Hallett was disabled for a time, but soon returned to the game.

Knoxville played a good game with Tillar and J. Kelts forward. Davenport and Wilson were guards and Tuttle center. Wilson was forced from the game in the second half with R. Kelts going in. Also in the second half J. Kelts was replaced by Birdsall.

High scorers for Woodhull were McGuire, who made thirteen points, and Hallett, who made nine. For Knoxville, Tillar made thirteen and R. Kelts made six.

Both teams played a fast, clean game and Woodhull seems to be in good shape for a league season.

Senior Play "Big Hearted Herbert" Pleased Crowd

The senior play "Big Hearted Herbert", played before a near-capacity crowd in the school auditorium Friday evening, proved a big hit. The play was packed with comedy from beginning to end and the large audience was in a laughing mood.

The students selected for the various parts seemed in nearly every case to be admirably fitted for their roles, and avoided the short-comings too often found in amateur performances. That is they knew their parts and spoke distinctly enough to be heard all over the house. It would hardly be fair to single out the various young actors for special mention, as each one did well, but it will be long remembered that Lucy Beers really starred in her interpretation of the difficult character of "Elizabeth". It was a role of dual personality and changing moods quite beyond the capacity of most high school student actors.

The 1937-38 Addison High School orchestra played several selections before the play and between acts. This was the first public appearance of the school orchestra under its new leadership and the group showed promise of coming up to the high musical standards for which the school has long been famous.

County "Ag" Teachers Meet in Addison Dec 1

The monthly meeting of the agriculture teachers of Steuben County will be held in the Addison High School building Wednesday, December 1. Frank Finnerty of the local faculty is in charge of the meeting and making plans for the affair. Prof. Cunningham of the Cornell faculty is being sought as the speaker for the occasion. Mr. Finnerty is active in the county group and has held office for several years past.

A THANKSGIVING PRAYER

Our humble thanks we offer Thee, O Lord for this Thanksgiving. We give thanks for Your blessings showered upon us as a nation and as individuals for whom this nation is established.

We thank Thee for our liberties, for justice and the right to worship Thee in our own manner. Our prayers are also offered for those who made our lives possible in this favored nation and for those who sacrificed that we might enjoy this Thanksgiving.

THANKSGIVING

Another Thanksgiving season is at hand. The leaves of another calendar have been torn off until we reached the eleventh month of the year 1937, and with that leaf the realization another harvest has followed our spring sowing. And harvest to the Pilgrim was the greatest season for rejoicing and giving thanks to God for the food which would enable his family to live through until another spring.

We too should give thanks. For the poorest in ths land today is infinitely richer in food and clothing, than was the most well-to-do of the Pilgrims. With slight effort we can bring to our tables the most sought delicacies of the entire world. The American laborer of 1937 can have luxuries of life that King Midas could not have commanded with all the wealth in his golden hoards.

Yet the Pilgrim with his little pile of corn, and his little mound of vegetables, was far more reverently thankful to God for his blessings than we in the abundance of our life in these days ever are. Why was the Pilgrims so ready to give thanks for the little he had? Why had the Pilgrim come to this land in the first place? He had come from a land of far greater security so that he might exercise what he believed was his right as a human being to worship God in his own way.

How greatly we have progressed since the days of the Pilgrims and how far we have fallen back in the homage we pay to the Divine. Too many of us have spent so much of our time reaching for the froth of life, we have failed to drink of the springwater of faith and hope and charity.

Many will say, perhaps, on this Thanksgiving Day that they have nothing to be thankful for. But to say that is to give a broad denial of everything life can offer in a so-called Christian nation. Have we lost our money? We may have health and ambition to regain it. Have we been sick? We should be thankful to be well again. Are we facing critical illness or an operation? We are blessed with the most skillful doctors and surgeons in the world and have the finest hospital facilities to speed our recovery. Have we lost all our dear ones, so life has no further interest? We should not say that. Instead we should be thankful that life holds a multitude of interests for those who will seek them, and the greatest interest any life can hold is the will to seek those less fortunate whom we can assist, even though our help may necessarily be small.

We Americans as a nation should be thankful that our country is not engaged in any war to tear families apart and kill and cripple our strongest youth. We should be thankful that the free institutions which have been stripped from many other liberty-loving people, are still held fast by our citizens. Free speech, a free press and the free privilege to worship God unmolested, these inherent liberties for which our forebears spilled their blood are still our own possession.

And as we give thanks to these cherished heritages from the Pilgrims and those who followed after, we should pray for the courage of strong conviction that we too may defend those liberties. For it would be both idle and silly to express thanks for institutions we have inherited, if we lack the courage and common sense to protect those institutions for the generations to follow us.

Although we live in a world that seems aflame with fear, hatred, war, and rumors of war there yet is room for thanksgiving.

WILL IDAHO MAKE A DENT?

Idaho is meeting an emergency with an emergency treatment.

During the first six months of the year, Idaho's traffic deaths increased alarmingly. Idaho officials didn't attempt to correct the situation with talk and vague suggestions. Instead, the governor ordered the department of public works and law enforcement to utilize their joint man power, finances and equipment for the purpose of properly policing and supervising roads. Vacations of all patrolmen were cancelled, and seven new officers were added. Additional patrol cars equipped with radios, loud speakers and special lighting devices, were purchased.

Traffic deaths and accidents have increased lately in most all states. Sporadic safety campaigns are started in bursts of enthusiasm that soon die. Brief law enforcement drives are instigated and then forgotten. And the accident toll soars.

Dismissing all humanitarian considerations, and looking at the accident problem from the economic standpoint alone, accident reduction is a burning necessity. Last year the direct cost of highway accidents was more than a billion and a half dollars—and the indirect costs were several times as great. Today we actually spend half as much money, directly, to pay for accidents, as we pay for gasoline. The average cost is $43.00 per family per year.

Will Idaho make a dent in highway slaughter? Other states should watch the experiment.

ANOTHER LICENSING THREAT

For some time a joint legislative hearing has been conducting an investigation into the price of gasoline. According to Harold B. Ehrlich, chairman of this committee, it will probably "recommend licensing of gasoline stations by the state to prevent further overcrowding of the field and resultant higher gasoline prices."

Here are some excerpts from the report:

"There is little doubt that the number of gasoline service stations . . . has a bearing on retail gasoline prices. This is admitted, indirectly, by one of the officials of the National Association of Petroleum Retailers who said that 'the retail field of the (gasoline) industry is overbuilt, some estimates being in excess of fifty per cent and in certain localities is far greater than that amount'. Fifteen or twenty years ago retail stations made a fair return on the investment with one cent a gallon gross profit. Today, due to a thinning out of gallonage caused by increased construction of gasoline stations, a station must make at least three and a half cents gross profit per gallon. In many instances as much as five cents gross per gallon is necessary. This increase has to be paid by the consuming public. Thus a vicious circle has been formed, ever inuring to the detriment of the consuming public. Additional stations mean reduced gallonage at the existing stations and reduced gallonage means the necessity for increased price in order to have successful operation of the existing station, which increase, of necessity, must be born by the consumer.

"The question (of licensing) must be studied carefully", Mr. Ehrlich said. "It is claimed that much of the movement of real estate during the past few years has been for the use of new gasoline stations and that a large portion of future sales is tied up with the retailing of gasoline. What effect a state policy that would suddenly stop the sale of real estate in this direction might have on the market, and whether that effect would be greater than the benefits to be derived by the consumer are weighty questions upon which the committee seeks further enlightenment. Realtors and all others interested in the sale of real estate and gasoline are expected to state their views to the committee at its New York City hearings, which will be open to all interested in the subject as well as the general public.

Mr. Ehrlich has failed to take into consideration, apparently, the fact that gasoline stations are acting as tax collectors both for the State of New York and the federal government—entirely without remuneration. Consumers of gasoline would have little reason to kick about the price they pay for gasoline today, if these prices were not padded out with huge state and federal taxes.

What the public would be greatly interested in would be an investigation by some pure private citizens into what the politicians and bureaucrats at Albany and Washington actually do with the funds collected as a tax on the gasoline buyers. There is far more reason to investigate the subject of wastage of tax funds, than there is to investigate the conduct of competitive business like the retail sale of gasoline.

And when Mr. Ehrlich and his committee talk about the subject of licensing stations to limit the vendors, tax-paying citizens better sit up and take notice. Licensing is just another camouflage for extracting more tax dollars from the public, and should be resisted as strongly by the man in the street as by the gasoline industry in general.

IS BATH JAIL A SIEVE?

What's the matter over at Bath jail, anyway? Steuben County was entrusted with a convict serving a term in Auburn State Prison and the jailbird, Spagnolia, escaped. He didn't saw his way out, he didn't overpower a guard, he just walked out of the door and vanished into thin air.

What is the matter with Bath jail? The county spent a mint of money building it only a few years ago. It's a new jail. It certainly should not be called a sieve, or if it should then this county and its taxpayers suffered a terrible rooking when they bonded themselves around a half million dollars for it.

Perhaps the jail is like the fellow who bought a brand new, expensive automobile. It had a powerful motor that would pull it along the road 90 miles an hour. It had so much "pick-up" it would jerk the driver clean out from under his hat. To demonstrate that "pick-up" to a friend the owner one day stopped the car on a crossing in front of an oncoming express train. The car didn't get off—was wrecked and the wise driver was killed. Was that the fault of the big, powerful car?

Spagnolia escaped from Steuben County jail. Was that the fault of the jail? Steuben County jail is equipped with cell-blocks which can, and should be fastened with compound bars that allow a jailer to lock or release an entire row of cells at once. These bars cannot be "thrown" by a prisoner inside. But Spagnolia was not in one of these cells when he escaped from Steuben County jail. If he had been in a cell where he belonged, he would not have escaped. Why wasn't Spagnolia kept in a regular cell in the jail? Why did he have this private room on the third floor, out of which he walked with such apparent ease?

Well there are a lot of questions that might be asked about this fellow Spagnolia. And not the least of these would be the question of why this "borrowed" convict from the State's prison was kept more like a guest than as a prisoner.

Anti-Lynching Bill Is Linked To Move for Centralized Power

By MARK SULLIVAN

IF ETERNAL vigilance is the price of liberty, so is eternal clarity the price of understanding. And so also is understanding the path to wise action. All three of these truisms are applicable to the so-called "anti-lynching" bill now before Congress.

Lack of understanding of the bill is widespread, is indeed almost universal. The very name by which the bill is popularly called is misleading, "anti-lynching" is a convenient phrase for writers of headlines struggling for condensation against limitations of space. But this is not an "anti-lynching" bill. The bill does not make lynching any more a crime than it always has been. The new crime created by the bill is failure of sheriffs or other local officials to be duly diligent in preventing and punishing lynchings.

The popular misunderstanding of the bill goes farther. The American Institute of Public Opinion recently conducted one of its "sampling" polls to find out whether or not the so-called anti-lynching bill is popular. The institute discovered that seventy-two out of every 100 persons queried favored the bill. But just what was the question which the institute put before those whom it queried? The question read: "Should Congress pass a law which would make lynching a Federal crime?" This phrasing of the question repeats the misnomer already mentioned.

Besides, how many of the persons questioned really understood the bill? How many of them were familiar with just what it would do, what effect it would have on the American structure of government, on the distinction between state sovereignty and Federal sovereignty? The persons questioned by the institute must have included, one assumes, a cross-section of the population as a whole, from the least informed to the best informed. If the questionnaire did not reach all kinds of persons, the results of it would be by that fact misleading. But if the questionnaire did include the less well informed, its results must be based in part upon the answers of persons who have little understanding of the measure. Without knowing anything of the process by which the Institute of Public Opinion conducts its questionnaires. I should imagine that a considerable number of those who answered "yes" were merely saying, in effect, that they believed lynching to be odious and that it ought to be suppressed.

Actually, what the bill does is to give a new and portentous power to the Federal government. It would authorize the Federal government to send a Federal official into any county or city in which a lynching has occurred, to decide whether the local state or county officials had practiced "all diligent efforts" in preventing or punishing the lynching. If the Federal officials felt the state or county officials had not made "all diligent efforts," then the Federal government would proceed to fine or imprison the state or county official and also to assess damages of from $2,500 to $10,000 against the county in which the lynching occurred.

This immense extension of Federal jurisdiction, this subjection of local government to government from Washington, is proposed at a fateful time. It is proposed when those now in control of the Federal government are engaged in an attempt, on many fronts and through many devices, to extend their power to a point at which, in the judgment of thoughtful persons, the states would become little more than mere obsolete names on the map. In this process of centralizing power at Washington, the so-called "anti-lynching" bill, if enacted and is sustained by the Supreme Court, would be a precedent under which the centralization at Washington would be practically without hindrance or limit. One can imagine the radicals, in the Administration and out, who wish to turn America into a centralized, one-man, totalitarian government—one can imagine them slyly watching their plans furthered by innocent humanitarians who detest lynching.

There is another path to understanding of the "anti-lynching" bill, the political path. From the Civil War on there has been a considerable Negro population in such cities as Cincinnati, Indianapolis and St. Louis. For nearly seventy years these Negroes voted the Republican ticket. Since the three cities were in pivotal states, states more or less evenly divided between Republicans and Democrats, this Negro vote was extremely important to the Republicans. It has been said, and I suspect statistics might bear it out, that if every Negro in Ohio, Indiana and Missouri had always voted the Democratic ticket the Republicans would have lost those states in many Presidential elections and consequently lost the Presidential elections.

After the great war considerable Negro populations gathered in other Northern cities—New York, Detroit, Chicago. Here, again, until 1932, these Negro colonies commonly voted Republican.

Since 1932 the Negro colonies in Northern cities have prevailingly voted Democratic. So, now, it is the Democrats who father anti-lynching bills.

In the present Congress both Republicans and Democrats from the North will compete in their eagerness to support the anti-lynching bill—the Democrats because they have the Negro votes and hope to keep them, the Republicans because they hope to get the Negroes back. But there is one Republican Senator who will not support the measure—and he is, perhaps, the Senator most competent to have understanding of its constitutional evil, its menace to the American form of government. Senator Borah has consistently opposed anti-lynching bills and courageously met the criticism visited upon him. Senator Borah does not condone lynching. But Senator Borah knows the danger of approaching the problem of lynching in this way.

Footnote to a Roosevelt Biography

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Not for more than two years, not since he was so annoyed by what the Supreme Court had to say about the N. R. A., has Mr. Roosevelt adopted such a conciliatory tone as he did in his message to Congress. On almost all important occasions for about thirty months Mr. Roosevelt has portrayed himself as the champion of the exploited masses in a struggle against their oppressors. He has seemed to say that his personal enemies were the public's enemies, and only too often he has let it appear as if he were more determined to triumph over his enemies than to attain his social objectives.

The message to Congress was written in a cooler, calmer and less vindictive mood. There is not a phrase in it which implies that Mr. Roosevelt himself is peculiarly inspired and that to disagree with him is a form of moral turpitude. Whatever may come of his specific promises and proposals, Mr. Roosevelt has yielded once more to the more tolerant and impersonal side of his character. With a humility which he has rarely exhibited since the great first days of his Administration, he speaks again as one seeking to persuade his opponents rather than as a thwarted man defiantly trying to overawe them.

It is natural enough that many who read his message, particularly those who are nursing their wounds, should be asking whether this relapse into good will is authentic or is only a tactical maneuver made necessary by the business recession. Put to some public men, this would be a real question: in a leader like Lenin, for example, it was probably true that his changes of policy were more or less deliberately calculated maneuvers. For Lenin had a rigidly dogmatic and coherent idea of what he was trying to do, and when he yielded to circumstances, he supposed himself to be making a purely temporary and strategic retreat.

But Mr. Roosevelt is not in the least like Lenin; if there is one thing he does not possess, it is a dogmatic and coherent philosophy. He has consistent sympathies with the poor and perhaps more or less fixed antipathies against certain kinds of rich men, particularly against the more newly rich ones. Mr. Roosevelt does not, however, have a definite, a closely reasoned and deeply held, social philosophy. He has never acquired one and probably would not like it if he had. He did not begin to bother his head greatly about the fundamental difficulties of modern civilization until about 1930. Before that he was predominantly an ardently regular Democratic partisan with a strong hankering to be on the side of the angels.

Since 1930 he has, of course, been a very busy man, and he himself would no doubt readily admit that he has been quite unable to go very thoroughly into the scientific foundations of the general ideas which he has espoused. Mr. Roosevelt has had to formulate his ideas by listening to his visitors, selecting out of what they said, and out of what he thought they had said, those ideas which seemed most plausible when he remembered them later.

And so because he does not have a consistent and systematic theory of what he is doing, there is no use asking whether he is the more "sincere" when he attacks his opponents as economic royalists or when he treats them as fellow citizens. He is no doubt equally sincere in both attitudes. For in the back of his mind there are incompatible ideas which make either attitude seem eminently reasonable.

The message of last week is a particularly interesting contribution to Mr. Roosevelt's biography because the two main but contradictory lines of his thought are so innocently and sincerely placed side by side.

In the first half of the message Mr. Roosevelt is inspired by the theory that the success of his reforms "depends on a wider distribution of an immensely enlarged national income." In so far as he lets this theory possess him, he is bound to be conciliatory to capital and interested in encouraging the normal functions of the capitalist system. But in the second half of the message, in discussing farm and labor legislation, the idea that he must have an immensely enlarged national income is superseded by the idea that the government must "maintain purchasing power" by preventing "overproduction" and by fixing wages.

When this second idea is dominant in his mind, Mr. Roosevelt feels it to be rational to lead a crusade against the economic royalists. Thus in his second inaugural, as he dedicated himself to the one-third who are ill-housed, ill-clad, ill-nourished, he entirely forgot to say that they could be well housed, well-clad and well-nourished only if the national income were immensely enlarged. Having forgotten to say it, the only inference was that the poor could be enriched by waging a class struggle, and that precisely is what his Left-Wing supporters thought he meant.

But when the first idea is dominant, and Mr. Roosevelt remembers that the wealth has yet to be produced which would radically improve the American standard of life, he writes a message like that of last week, suppresses the idea of class struggle and listens to those among his advisers who really would like to see private enterprise flourish.

The impression of instability which he gives even to his friendliest supporters arises almost certainly from the fact that he has never thought out clearly in his own mind whether he believes in "a wider distribution of an immensely enlarged national income" or in government intervention "to maintain wage income and the purchasing power of the nation." Probably he would argue that the two notions are quite consistent. But in fact they are not consistent. For the one requires the increased production of wealth, whereas the other calls for the limiting of production and provokes a struggle over the distribution of the resulting scarcity.

The purchasing power theory is in practice nothing but an effort to give government support to certain favored groups in order that they may be able to exact higher prices from the rest of the people. If agricultural prices are forced upward, the higher prices must be paid for by the consumer. If wages are forced upward by law, they are paid by those workers who cannot be employed at those wages or by the whole population in the form of relief.

Now, of course, Mr. Roosevelt is not the inventor of this theory, nor is he the first to practice it. It is the underlying theory of the Republican tariff and of the whole price-fixing movement by big business combinations. All that Mr. Roosevelt has done is to apply a bad theory for the supposed benefit of those classes who have hitherto been its chief victims, and perhaps the worst that can be said of the New Deal is that it has taught every one to think like an Old Guard Republican. It has persuaded agriculture, labor and the humanitarian reformers to adopt the fallacies of the protectionists and the monopolists.

Until Mr. Roosevelt manages to clarify his own thinking on these basic principles, he will probably continue to talk like a liberal one day and like a collectivist the next day, depending on which of his fundamentally incompatible ideas is at the time in the ascendant.

Volunteer Workers Greatly Improve Risingville Church

In the little village of Risingville, N. Y. stands a rural Methodist Episcopal Church which because of recent extensive improvements proves that rural churches need not be unattractive and uninviting.

About two years ago a few interested farmers got together with teams, scrapers and rakes and within a few hours transformed a mud-hole of a yard into a lawn which has become a thing of beauty. A year ago a few evergreen trees were set out which further enhanced the exterior of the church

During the past summer an electric lighting plant was installed which has been an added delight to the people. In addition the interior has been repainted including the seats and the floor, mahogany and cream being the colors chosen, and aisle runners have further added to the coziness of the building. The final touch to the improved building has been the change made in the rostrum and front of the church.

To the plain unattractive front, have been added at back center two relief-columns in keeping with the regular church architecture. Hanging between these columns is a beautiful green drape making a background for the cream and mahogany colored, two shelf altar which is adorned by a cross in the center and a Grecian vase at each end. The pulpit has been moved to one side and is balanced by a reading stand made for the other side. The rostrum arrangement is perhaps a corruption of the Gothic to the colonial style. However the idea embodied has greatly added to the interior attractiveness of the church and the change made has helped greatly to create an atmosphere conducive of worship.

The fine piece of work was planned and largely executed by the able leadership of the Rev. R. H. Crane. Willing workers caught the vision with him and together the work was completed with great rejoicing at a rededication service held Sunday afternoon and evening September 26.

The project has been financed by the gifts of members and local friends of the church and the generosity of many friends out side of the community, Mrs. Kenneth Smith is to be given considerable credit for her persistent and untiring efforts in soliciting money for the above work. She and other members of the Risingville Church wish to acknowledge gifts from the following people:

Grade Assembly Friday Presents Varied Program

Thanksgiving songs and plays were part of the program given by the grade students in an assembly program Friday morning. The program opened with all the students singing "America".

"Talking Books" was the title of a play presented by the third grade students. This was a play about the treatment of books by various readers, with girls of the class made up as popular books.

Members of the same class presented a vocal selection "Thanksgiving Day" which was followed by the song "Over the River and Thru the Woods" with all present taking part in the singing.

Fourth graders dramatized a scene from the book "Dancing Cloud" in which "Slim Cloud", an Indian maiden was taught to weave by her mother. The story was read by one member of the class and acted out by others.

A unique game-play "Who Am I" was presented by the fourth graders. Those taking part were dressed to represent characters from books studied in school and read outside. Among the characters depicted and guessed by the audience were: Penucchio, Heidi, Robin Hood, Golden Locks, Cinderella, Hans Brinker, Robinson Crusoe, Toby Tyler and the one most readily identified, Little Black Sambo.

Ruth Ann Smyth closed the program with two piano solos, "Country Lanes" and "Dream Waltz". Mr. Gladstone presented James Allan Troke, who announced a show in the auditorium for Saturday afternoon for grade students.

Olive Randolph Is Wed to Andrew Cornell

The marriage of Miss Olive Belle Randolph, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Randolph of 130 Platt Street, Painted Post and Andrew Cornell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Brayton N. Cornell of Woodhull, was solemnized Saturday afternoon.

The wedding ceremony, performed by the Rev. Carl J. Grabb, took place at three o'clock at the Painted Post Presbyterian Church which was decorated with palms, chrysanthemums, pompoms and candelabra. Mrs. Edgar Tillman presided at the organ during the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in blue cut velvet with matching accessories and wore a blue turban with short veil. She carried a bouquet of roses and forget-me-nots. Mrs. Frederick Fryer, who was matron of honor, was dressed in a wine velvet gown with matching accessories and carried a bouquet of white roses and forget-me-nots.

Frederick Fryer of Painted Post was best man. The following were ushers, Perry Cornell of Woodhull, brother of the groom, Edward Winnie of Corning; Merle Boucher of Wellsville, cousin of Mr. Cornell and Wilbur Hovey of Presho.

The gown worn by the bride's mother was of rose with matching accessories, and that of Mrs. Cornell, mother of the groom, was of green with matching accessories.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony after which Mr. and Mrs. Cornell left for a motor trip. The bride's traveling costume was a three-piece wine ensemble with black suede pumps and accessories.

Mrs. Cornell is a graduate of the Painted Post High School and has been employed in the Ingersoll-Rand Company office at Painted Post. Mr. Cornell was graduated from the Woodhull High School and Alfred Agriculture School. He is now employed in the tool room of the Ingersoll-Rand Company.

Mr. and Mrs. Cornell will make their home at 132 West High street, Painted Post.

Those from Woodhull attending the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. Brayton N. Cornell, Mr. and Mrs. Perry Cornell, Miss Agnes Cornell, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Towsley, Willard and Elinor Towsley, Mrs. Carrie Towsley and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ten Broeck.

About 3,500 people lost their lives in farm fires during 1936. The property loss was about $100,000,000. This does not include the fire loss in the non-farming rural communities, estimated at $125,000,000.

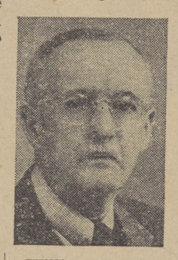
William Rial of Batavia Has Run Linotype Thirty-three Years



William H. Rial

"It was while I was a student at the Addison, N. Y., High School in 1886 that printerdom was agog over the invention and actual operation of the Linotype," writes William H. Rial of Batavia, N. Y., who continues: "At that time I wrote the local news of the village for the Elmira Daily Gazette, of which R. R. Soper was the editor and state president of the Associated Press, and for the Elmira Sunday Telegram, published by Harry Brooks and Charles Hazard. The compositors on those papers, which now form a part of the Gannett chain, were skeptical of the practicability of any typesetting machine.

"J. Sloat Fassett was publisher of the Elmira Advertiser. On that paper was a swift hand compositor, Edward ("Curly") Matteson, who was a native of Scranton, Pa., and his fellow craftsmen were willing to wager 'he could set more type in a day than any machine Otto Mergenthaler could invent'.

"Charles W. Sackett, an Addison druggist, showed me a copy of the New York Tribune that contained the first Linotype composition.

Hand Comps Didn't Care

"Employed on the Addison Advertiser in 1886 was Walter E. Ames, who at the time of his death, in 1930, was trustee of the Union Printers' Home at Colorado Springs. This paper was established in 1858. When the Linotype first began operation, the hand compositors were not greatly concerned, their attitude being that it would be a long period before the machines would be installed in country offices, equipped, and edited by Maurice E. Today the Advertiser, Linotype-Miller, also publishes the Woodhull Sentinel.

"In 1885 my newspaper apprenticeship began with the Addison Record, which plant in later years was moved to Galeton, Pa. In 1892 I was foreman of the Medina (N.Y.) Register. In 1893 I was with the E. R. Andrews law printing firm in Rochester, and while there witnessed the installation of the first two linotypes in the office of the Union and Advertiser, which later became the Times-Union of today.

"When the Batavia Daily News, published by Griswold & McWain, installed its first two Linotypes, in 1901, Frank C. Fix and myself were the operators. There are now five Linotypes in the plant. I have spent thirty-three years operating a Linotype, and served as charter president of Batavia Typographical Union, No. 511, in 1902, and retain membership in the organization. I am certain that union printers everywhere today heartily congratulate the Mergenthaler Linotype Company on what it has done in the last fifty years.

Old Timers Were Sociable

"In the days before the Linotype, the printers in the average office were companionable to a greater extent than is possible today, with the constant attention required in machine composition. Old time compositors, during the period when the type was distributed in the cases, loved to tell stories, to smoke and to renew acquaintances or greet a newcomer. In the country villages the merchants permitted their advertisements to run weeks without change, and printers who set the ads usually tried to get in the space allotted all the type faces available. The advertiser did little to interest women customers in particular bargains. Hardware dealers and drug concerns were prominent advertisers, but food concerns had not entered the field. Compositors were galvanized into greater activity as press time approached on a daily paper, while on a weekly, press day was a great event, all hurly burly, because job work had been performed much of the time by most of the typesetters and the newspaper had been in second place attention.

"When the Linotype arrived in country offices, it was the custom in the early days to retain the hand compositors several weeks, 'to be sure', to quote the attitude of many proprietors, 'that the machines really could do all that was claimed for them'. Their doubts were soon removed.

"What a fine thing it would be were it possible for the old time printers of decades before the Linotype to came back and behold the machines of 1937."

Open Deer Season Wanted in Steuben County Game Club Speakers Say

Annual banquet held Thursday night in Odd Fellows hall—Ray Reed tells why open season wanted and why it has not been secured — Boxing bouts and music feature entertainment program — Rebekah ladies provide chicken dinner—Pictures shown.

The objectives of the Conservation Department of the state and of fish and game clubs are the preservation of wild life, improving the quality and quantity of these resources and educating the public to a wise and judicious use of the natural resources of this state.

These objectives were enunciated at the annual banquet of the Addison Fish and Game Club held Thursday night in Odd Fellows Hall. A chicken dinner was served by women of the Rebekah Lodge.

Boxing Bout

Hugh Varn, president, presided as toastmaster. He expressed his gratitude to the ticket committee and to Peter Laffkas who sold 21 tickets William Miller, athletic director of the high school, was presented and he in turn presented two boxing bouts with high school students. In the first bout "Battling" Shelanskey opposed "Three Round" Fritz. The second affray was between Tom Lyons and Harold Heidrick. Both bouts were declared a draw.

Club Objectives

Mr. Varn opened the speaking program by stating that, "This annual banquet serves a definite purpose. The Fish and Game Club now has a new club house and equipment. This has been done with funds received from meets and from the nominal fee charged members of $1 per year. Meetings have not been held too regularly but should interest those interested in hunting, fishing and outdoor recreation and the preservation of these sports.

"Every man and woman who buys a license, and women do not have to have a license to fish, but for everyone of these there is a certain amount of game destroyed. If no aid is given by the State Conservation Department and clubs this game will soon be driven from its haunts. Our interest here is to make you all conservationists.

"T. R." a Conservationist

"'Teddy' Roosevelt was the first to realize that a program had to be inaugurated for the conservation of natural resources and he wisely chose Gifford Pinchot, Pennsylvania, who did a good job.

"The New York Department is instituting an educational campaign and getting people thinking about conservation. Much is also being spent in the propagation of wild life.

Farmers vs Sportsmen

"There seems to be a feud between the sportsman and the farmer. Sometimes their ideas conflict. But I believe that with greater cooperation farmers will permit the use of their lands by considerate sportsmen. However, there is an increasing number of posters going up about the country prohibiting hunting on the posted lands. This comes from misunderstandings of viewpoints.

"It is true we liberate game and the farmers feed them. And there are stories of fences broken and animals shot by careless hunters, but many of them are exaggerated. The time is coming, however, when hunting will be a rich man's sport for he will have to belong to a club with a large preserve or own large numbers of acres himself on which to hunt.

Open Season on Deer

"Another problem confronting the sportsman is the fact there are too many deer in this vicinity. We think we should have an open season in the county. We should write to our state representatives about getting this.

"Something of what our club has done this year may not be amiss here. We built a new club house on the William McCarthy farm. He is one of our foremost members and has been since our inception. We also have a new trap house, skeet field, and released 350 or more pheasants this year and also other game. In addition we have placed many fish in the river. But the measure of success to any game club is in how far have we gone in the matter of conservation.

"The Conservation Department has sent us two men with motion pictures. They will be presented by Ray Reed our game warden. When we think of him we must realize that his job is not just in catching game violators but in educating the public and to see that game is cared for in other ways."

Protector Reed

Mr. Reed prefaced his remarks by stating that at a meeting of sportsmen of Cattaraugus, Tioga, Steuben, Chemung, Allegany and Broome counties held recently at which this matter of open deer season was discussed, other counties objected but Steuben County wanted it. However, it was not felt that this county should open and have people from Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse and Albany hunting here with other counties closed.

Mr. Reed told of 50 permits issued to farmers to kill deer destroying crops on their lands last year but few were used. Last year 51 deer were killed in two months on the highways of Steuben County owing to their being so plentiful. Mr. Reed advocated an open season in all counties along the Pennsylvania border. He explained this permit system which protects farm crops and gives the farmer redress, but the carcass must be given the welfare department.

He then spoke of the men of the Conservation Department who are making an educational trip through the state and Steuben County is their starting point. Mr. Reed closed his remarks by asking people to cooperate with him and the state will aid the people.

Phillip Wolf of the Conservation Department was presented. He told of his experiences in the department in presenting publicity. Work is being conducted in the schools to educate the juniors in the conservation of the national resources. He said, "We boast of the richest nation in the world but to remain that way we must conserve our natural resources."

Motion Pictures

He then introduced Douglas Finch, projectionist, who showed six reels of silent and talking mation pictures on: Beavers at work, deer at play, raising pheasants, high spots of New York State and the Mt. Van Hoevernburg bob-sled run at Lake Placid.

Music throughout the program was provided by Squire Husted and his orchestra. Women in charge of the chicken dinner were: Kitchen committee, Mrs. L. Robbins, Mrs. F. Hess, Mrs. A. Barkalow, Mrs. W. Gage, Mrs. E. Wade, Mrs. C. Baxter, Mrs. C. Aumick and Mrs. L. Hill; dining room, Mrs. L. Sharpe, Mrs. C. Rouse, Miss Margaret Aumick, Miss Bernice Aumick, Mrs. Mabel Archer, Mrs. George M. Smith, Mrs. C. E. Benedict and Mrs. Jennie Mose.

Van Cise Trial Brings Grief To Officers

Anthony Silinonte, 25, who is in jail on a charge of murdering William Van Cise, Addison farmer in 1932, has been denied an appeal by the Court of Appeals and now faces the electric chair. His only hope is a pardon from Governor Herbert H. Lehman. He is in Sing Sing prison.

Arrested with him at the time were Bartolo Guccia, Gus Alexis, Anthony Mistretta and Onefero Coraci. The quartet has been freed by a jury of complicity in this murder. A motion to dismiss the charges of murder against the four arising out of the death of the second Van Cise brother will be argued in Rochester this week.

In conjunction with the trial state and county police officials are seeking Joseph Spagnolia, who escaped from the county jail late Saturday night or early Sunday morning under questionable circumstances. Spagnolia was a star witness in the case and it is believed that he feared the wrath of the freed prisoners and hence escaped.

Miss Addison to Be Selected In High School Tuesday Night

Forty-four local girls will compete Tuesday evening, November 30 at 8 o'clock in the Addison High School Auditorium. Of these fourteen will be tiny tots of the first, second and third grades, who will wear formal clothes and represent local merchants in this unique contest.

There will be thirty of the older girls and they will be in three sections, ten in each section. Through a process of elimination three will be selected from each section by three out-of-town judges. The nine will go through a routine and three selected from the nine. The judges will then decide on first, second and third place winners. This becomes tense as the number gets smaller.

Besides the trophies the winners will receive beautiful arm bouquets from the Mauder gardens, and several cash credit certificates. The little tots have their contest separate and three will be selected from their section. First place kiddie will receive a trophy.

Group photographs will be taken of the girls immediately following the prize decisions. No one locally participates in the judging in any way. A half hour prelude of specialties will precede the main event. A number of children will decorate the stage in costumes of foreign countries. To see nearly 60 of the pick of Addison youth in pretty formals with banners of gold letters and beautiful color effects makes a sight of colorful beauty worth seeing.

Allan Troke, of Sidney, Ohio, a former Chautauqua lecturer and entertainer will intersperse the judging with magical and musical numbers and also have complete charge as master-of-ceremonies.

I Pick 'em Up

TRUE STORIES OF HITCH HIKERS

by L. ELLIS EVONS

I Help a Doctor

A fine looking elderly man was trudging up a hill with a large heavy suit case. It was warm and as the place was far away from any town or house my sympathy for anyone walking and lugging a heavy grip would not let me pass him by, so I pulled the old car up to him and invited him to get in. He looked at me as though he could not believe that anyone could be so charitable as to offer a ride without being asked.

"Say," I said, "how come you are away out here walking, and that grip, why it certainly weighs something." "It certainly does, and you are certainly a gentleman and a good Samaritan. It is like this. I am Doctor S—— I am a retired United States Army surgeon, here is my card. I have been ship surgeon on the steamers sailing between New York and South American ports.

"I am taking a three months' leave of absence and took a bus out here to see some old friends who live on a farm back a piece from where you so kindly gave me a lift. They were not at home and there I was out in the open and I was walking, hoping to come to a phone so I could find out when another bus would come along."

The fact that he was a physician and I a lecturer on health, made conversation very easy. Soon he was telling me of his years of service with the government, his retirement on pension and taking the position as ship surgeon to keep from going stale. Lancaster, Pa., was his home town, but his only living relative was a daughter in New York State. Talking about medicine and antiseptics he was very much interested to know about the things I recommended to the people attending my health lectures.

They must have been appealing, for after explaining my theories on health and the scientific properties of the antiseptics I sold, he bought about four dollars worth. This was quite different from my usual experience as most all hikers cost me money. However, I did not consider him a hiker as I had given him the lift without being asked.

There was one very important thing that we discussed and the doctor's trips to the countries to the south brought the subject right to the front. As a student of history I had often wondered how the ancient civilization of Yucatan vanished.

Ruins discovered in Yucatan give every evidence that at one time that country was a thickly populated and progressive nation. His answer was that this civilization was wiped out by the disease of syphilis, the most hereditary of all disease, was brought to Europe by the sailors of Columbus and other early voyagers to America. This disease is prevalent in the United States today to the extent of over three million cases and the seriousness is just beginning to be realized. The Federal Government has appropriated $25,000,000 and many states are also giving this special attention, for if the truth be known, syphilis causes more deaths today in our United States than any other disease, but the cause of death is given as heart disease and other classifications. Foreign countries are far ahead of the United States in preventive measures and we must give this attention, for if neglected the same thing could happen to us as happened to Yucatan.

My doctor friend bid me good-by when we reached Lancaster, but he gave me and every one something to think about. Full information about this campaign can be had from the Public Health Service, Washington, D. C.

Let Down in Business Noted Thruout Nation

Recent business and financial charts have shown a downward trend in trade and commerce. Now the government surveys state that the national income will probably be less than the estimated $69,000,000,000 for 1937. Prices and buying power of farm products have declined, says the Department of Agriculture.

The Government admits that there is a "recession" but the official economists think it is "temporary". Whenever the Government slumps it usually lays its shortcomings on the major movements in private industry.

At the present time the national situation shows what the Government calls "hesitant buying" by consumers. Of course this means that stocks will pile up in wholesale and retail places and in factories.

Changing Feeds

When pullets have reached the age of five months and are in good physical condition they should be laying if the feed and management are correct. If they are not laying it is most likely to be the feed which is causing the trouble especially is this true if the birds have a good house and are well cared for.

Flock owners who are not consistent in the feed they give the flock cannot expect good results. Birds will not do well on grain and table scrappings one day and cabbage and grain the next. They should have some good mash which may be purchased mixed or may be mixed at home. The same ingredients and the same amounts of each should be used if it is necessary to mix more provided the flock is laying or about to lay.

The same thing is true in feeding grain. If the flock is laying on one mixture of grain the mixture should not be changed suddenly because the egg production is likely to drop or cease entirely.

In purchasing feeds, either mash or grain, it is well to know that the ingredients are the same as have been used right along. Some cheap feeds vary in order to keep the price the same.

Some poultry owners have been surprised to find that their hens and pullets have dropped off in laying even though the same feed is used and other factors remain the same. A careful analysis of the feed will probably show that the formula has changed to fit the price of the feed. Such a feed is expensive to use because of the loss of eggs.

In a mixed grain, for instance, the producer of the feed finds that the price of wheat has gone up while the cost of buckwheat or corn has remained the same or dropped in price. In order then to sell his feed at the same price he must change the formula and use less wheat and more buckwheat or corn. The grain may appear the same but the resulting loss in eggs to the purchaser makes such feeds costly.

After the flock is laying satisfactorily on one feed stick to it thruout the season.

Fire Control in Rural America

On a comparative basis, fire occurs oftener in smaller communities than in larger cities. Figures compiled by the National Board of Fire Underwriters show that where 9.92 fires per 1,000 population occur annually in towns of 20,000-50,000 population, the rate drops to 8.39 in cities in the 250,000-500,000 bracket, and to 6 in metropolises housing 500,000 or more people.

The per capita fire loss in the 20,000-50,000 classification is $1.49, as against $1.36 in over 500,000 group. While statistics are not available for communities of less than 20,000 population, it is a logical supposition that both the number of fires per 1,000 people and the per capita loss are materially higher.

Fire waste is a grave problem to all the country—and it is more than ordinarily grave in our smaller cities, towns and villages. And on farms, where efficient fire-fighting equipment is often unobtainable, a fire that would be of small consequence in a well protected city may turn out to be a disaster. Loss of human and animal life through fire is likewise tragically high in our rural areas.

Any community or district, no matter how small in population, can quickly and simply reduce its fire loss. Fire marshals can instruct citizens in the proper technique of inspecting property with a view of eliminating hazards, and literature is available on the subject. "Spruce up" campaigns to tear down useless buildings, keep vacant lots clear, etc., are a great help in ridding the community of some of the gravest dangers. And in the matter of fire protection, many small towns and farming communities have proven it practical to finance district fire-fighting organizations which are strategically located where they may serve a wide surrounding territory swiftly and efficiently when fire breaks out. The cost of this, in the light of the service rendered, is insignificant.

How, What and Why

This paper has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-eddressed, stamped envelope, and mention the name of this paper, you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Walls and Ceiling

Miss K. J. M., writes: "The ceiling and walls of our print shop have become so darkened by smoke that they absorb considerable light. What preparation would be best to refinish the walls and ceiling, about 1200 square feet? The walls and ceiling are plastered.

The original finish is peeling in some places. Should this be removed before a new coating is applied and what method is advised in applying the new coating?"

Professor B. B. Robb of the department of agricultural engineering answers: "If the plaster is coming off, new plaster is needed; or it may be better to use hard wall boards.

"If the plaster is good and the old paint is dirty and peeling only in spots, remove all loose paint and sandpaper the area smoothly.

Perhaps the walls and ceiling should be washed with sponge and water. Add some mild soap or linseed oil soap to the water, also a small amount of washing powder or sal soda and a little flour and water paste. Brush this mixture onto the wall with a wide brush, from the bottom upwards. Let it stand for three or four minutes and then sponge it off with clear warm water. The flour paste tends to hold the soapy water on the wall long enough to dissolve the dirt.

"Some painters prefer to use a glue size, and we have also sent directions about this.

After the walls are thoroughly dried and cleaned and the rough places sandpapered smooth, they should be repainted with any of the so-called 'mill whites'. Your local paint dealer will undoubtedly have a good inside white in stock."

Self-Help Clothing

Mrs. V. S., writes: "Somewhere recently I came across a reference to "self-help" clothing for children. Can you tell me something about self-help garments and where I can get directions for making them?"

Ruth Scott of the State College of Home Economics replies: "We find that if clothing can be designed to open in front so that a child can see and get at the fastenings he enjoys dressing and undressing himself and becomes independent at an earlier age.

"Wide elastic in the tops of little boys' trousers and little girls' panties is easier to manage than buttons and buttonholes which cannot be reached. Care should be taken, however, that the elastic is not tight or it will interfere with the child's well-being and general comfort. Elastic webbing is satisfactory, it is soft and durable and need not be as tight as the narrow elastic to hold the garment in place.

Dresses and suits without collars, with the necks finished with a facing or binding, are easy to care for and are more comfortable for active youngsters.

"A copy of Cornell bulletin E-328, "Clothing for Children", has information on self-help clothing. This bulletin is sent free on request from the Publication Office, Roberts Hall, Ithaca, N. Y. The Bureau of Home Economics at Washington, D. C., also has several bulletins on the same subject, for which you may write."

F. F. A. CHAPTER CHATTER

During last week the ranks of the Future Farmers Chapter of the Addison High School were broken with the untimely death of our past officer Glenn Beers.

Throughout the latter part of his high school days Glenn was an "Ag" student and was one of the organizers of the F. F. A. in our school. He held the office of treasurer during the year 1934-35.

Popular with the entire student body "Beersy", as he was known, never found it a difficult job to smile. He always had a kind word of greeting for the humblest of students and many a lonesome freshman was cured of his lonesomeness by a cheery "hello" and a hearty slap on the back.

Glenn was a member of the best basketball team ever to represent our chapter. When the going was toughest, when the chips were down, when the other team was far superior to the "Aggies" both in manpower and basketball ability "Beersy" would rise to the occasion and pull the game out of the fire. The harder the battle the more he liked it, no opponent was too big or too tough for Glenn and often he made the remark "While I can see him I'll play him even", and he would.

Glenn Beers is dead. Taken from the life he loved at the early age of nineteen, but into those nineteen years of life "Beersy" crowded more adventure, more excitement and more happiness than most of us will ever attain in a normal three score years and ten.

Next Thursday many people will give thanks for various benefits received during the past year.

The past year has been a difficult one for most farmers, particularly those of the northeast. Egg and milk prices have not been in line with feed prices. Most farmers have had difficulty making ends meet. However, the coming year looks more promising than the past and that is something to be thankful for.

Holidays such as Thanksgiving help to move large quantities of foodstuff that the farmers raise. The next step is the disposition of farm products throughout the year the same as during the holiday season.

On Friday last the members of the Ag IV class who were not in the senior play visited Alfred. During the morning the boys judged various events. The afternoon was spent visiting exhibits which were put on by the Alfred State School of Agriculture. The boys were also entertained by the Alfred Glee Club and the finals at the state school speaking contest.

While in Alfred the boys visited Wendell Hewson, formerly of Addison. On the way home they visited the Almond school where Mr. Peck, former science teacher, is principal.

Arthur Putnam who was injured a week ago is still in the Corning Hospital but, it is hoped that he will be home soon as the plate on his leg has been set.

The Ag basketball schedule has been released by the committee appointed by Mr. Finnerty but a mistake has been made listing one game and a revision has had to be made.

The monthly Ag teachers meeting will be held December 1 in Addison. At that time the home-making teachers will also hold their meeting. Efforts are being made to secure Professor Cunningham of Cornell as speaker.

FRENCH HILL

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Barrett and son were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Sherwood of Addison.

Walter Tompson was in Bath recently to see his nephew, David Stoll who has been seriously ill.

Mrs. Mable Barrett returned home from Painted Post Friday where she has been helping to care for her sister, Mrs. Phil Griffith who is now in Corning Hospital. She expects to go back Monday.

Mrs. Will Barrett who has been seriously ill in Bath Hospital is reported somewhat improved at this time.

Raymond Barrett and William Clement finished threshing Saturday.

County Solons Take No Action On Pay Raises

No action was taken by the County Board of Supervisors on the salary requests of salaries of the court officials. Adjournment was taken to November 29. Salary increases are sought by the following: Harold Richardson, surrogate clerk, now heceiving $2,150; Bert G. Webster and Lillian Holly, in charge of the branch license bureaus at Corning and Hornell request $900 additional; A. D. Randall, court crier, now receiving $140 monthly asks $150; guards, cooks and laundryman in the jail also ask for increases who receive $85, $80 and $90 respectively each month; Cora Whitehead in the Election Commissioners' office asks $100 monthly from $80; Alma Gray, sheriff's clerk now receiving $1,020 and Bernice Utter, clerk in the children's agency asks an increase from $65 monthly.

In caucus the supervisors felt that with high taxes and general business conditions it would not be expedient to make the increase at this time.

Chevrolet Dealer Schools Planned This Week

Special supplementary training schools will be held the week of November 22 throughout nearly 10,000 Chevrolet dealerships in all parts of the United States, it was announced this week by C. W. Wood, manager of the Chevrolet service and mechanical department.

The schools are designed to supplement the training received by dealers' service and mechanical managers in the new product schools held for several weeks before the announcement of the new Chevrolet models for 1938, Mr. Wood explained. Every dealer's service man will be schooled to give full and complete service on the 1938 cars at the conclusion of the training week, he said.

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste

Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.

You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

SPORTS ON PARADE

by Leo Bolley

Editor's Note: Next week in this paper Leo Bolley, former football star at Niagara University and now one of the best known experts in the sports reporting world, will name his All Up-State New York team of 1937.

FOOTBALL'S most dramatic season in years is marching up to the climax with many great games on deck throughout the nation. These battles—some of them championship conflicts, some of them bitter traditional rivalries—will top off a season as glorious and giddy as we have ever seen.

This Fall has been a thriller throughout, right from the kick-off whistle down to this top-flight week. Dazzling plays, heroic rallies, unaccountable upsets in the wild scramble for glory leave one dizzy and delirious at the close of the campaign.

This is a double-header week—with a Thanksgiving Day feast on Thursday and a choice dessert menu on Saturday as fare for the football fan.

And now let's try to dope out the results of the ten games that we think are the most worth watching this week, four for Thanksgiving Day and six for Saturday, November 27. It would be a good idea to check with our radio forecasts in case some last minute development causes us to change our mind. But here's the line-up as it looks to us now.

Thanksgiving Day

CORNELL - PENNSYLVANIA: Penn wants this one, but Cornell won't let down in its annual Turkey Day classic.

BROWN - RUTGERS: Brown is improving and will be too much for a great little Rutgers team.

ALABAMA - VANDERBILT: Heavy firing in the South, with Alabama to win.

DETROIT - DUQUESNE: Very close, with a razor edge to Detroit.

Saturday, November 27

ARMY-NAVY: The Navy has the bigger guns in this year's edition of the service classic.

COLUMBIA - STANFORD: We doubt if Columbia can make the grade against its old Rose Bowl rival.

PITTSBURGH-DUKE: Duke has one of the great teams of the South, is apt to trip the Panther in this one. The vote to Duke.

FORDHAM-N.Y.U.: N.Y.U. won't surprise the Rams as they did last year. Fordham has too much.

NOTRE DAME - SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA: We figure Notre Dame to come through in this intersectional encounter that is always one of the most colorful of the day.

HOLY CROSS - BOSTON COLLEGE: We count on the Cross to win.

Next week we'll name our All Up-State team.

This Week In Sports

By the Grandstander

Fordham is in line with Alabama for the Rose Bowl bid by virtue of its victory Saturday over St. Mary's, Pacific Coast squad. The Fordham Ram is unbeaten so far this season. Alabama did not play Saturday.

Games to watch this week, and please note some are Thursday and some are Saturday. Thursday's games are: Rutgers vs Princeton at Providence, Cornell vs Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, Detroit and Duquesne in Pittsburgh, Alabama vs Vanderbilt in Nashville and Saturdays games are: Army vs Navy in Philadelphia, Boston College vs Holy Cross in Boston, Columbia vs Stanford at Baker Field, New York, Duke vs Pittsburgh in Durham, Fordham vs N. Y. U. at Yankee Stadium, Georgia vs Georgia Tech in Atlanta, Notre Dame vs Southern California in South Bend. Most of these games mark the season closing and the high light of the season for the contesting teams. Other well known teams not mentioned played their last games Saturday.

Ohio State-Michigan fans navigated slippery roads to get to that game and many of them sat along side the roads and listened to car radios, being unable to navigate the slippery roads. Several cars piled up in the vicinity of the stadium.

California stopped Stanford Saturday afternoon and thus becomes the west coast contender for the Rose Bowl game New Year's Day.

—o—

I never think of the Rose Bowl games but what I think of a radio commentator getting tight out there and spending much of the afternoon describing scenery instead of the football game.

—o—

Over 20,000 applications for tickets with checks attached are being returned to customers who would like to see the Army-Navy fracas this week. And over $400,000 has been paid by those who will see the contest.

—o—

Incidentally a $300,000 take for one afternoon's game has been quite common this season, the best in collegiate and professional football, since 1929.

It is early to be talking about next summer's crew races, but the west coast Washington Huskies are planning on again overcoming eastern opposition. This in spite of the fact the varsity crew will be short five men rowing last year. Al Ulbrickson, coach, had 115 candidates out for the five vacancies. It will be remembered the Washington Huskies were the Olympic champions.

Chicago holds tops in the two and four wall handball singles and doubles championships according to the A. A. U. Handball official rating. Joseph Platak of the Windy City is four wall champ and in the doubles is matched with Bob Weiller for the national championship. Harry Goldstein, Brooklyn has the one wall top ranking.

—o—

Tom Sullivan, St. Lawrence football coach, has been let out. He will complete this season. Dr. Laurens H. Se Lye, president, says, "a difference in personalities" caused the dismissal. Sullivan graduated from Colgate where he played. He practices law in St. Lawrence County.

FRUIT, FLOWERS AND GARDEN

Growing House Plants
J. M. Bickerton

Growing house plants is gaining popularity as a hobby that requires skill and knowledge. Not everyone who tries it is successful, but with proper care success will come.

Plants that grow in the typical home do not have ideal conditions for growth. Amateurs are likely to try to grow plants under conditions that doom the plant to failure at the start.

Because house plants are usually grown in pots of soil, it is hard to make sure they have enough food and water for good growth. Moisture in the home, especially in a heated home, is too low for the plants. Air temperatures, particularly on the inside of windows facing south, are apt to fluctuate widely and become too high or too low for best growth. Most plants require plenty of light and usually suffer from lack of it in the home.

If you grow plants in the home, try to provide a place where they will have plenty of light, enough moisture in the air, and good soil to grow in. Then choose plnts that will grow satisfactorily in average home conditions, and pleasing and attractive home decorations will result.

Railroads Crushed By Taxes, Says Writer

The American railroads with a roster of 222 association members recently went into a huddle in Chicago and reviewed their tale of woe. Ninety-six railroads are in the hands of receivers or trustees.

The solvent ones are being crushed between the millstones of old and new taxes, wage increases and low rates, writes J. E. Jones, newspaper correspondent and observer of national affairs, who says that with the consolation party adjourned the railroads will go back to their political masters and beg for help.

Cornell Books Eight Major Football Games

Cornell university's policy of scheduling only major football opponents will be continued through 1938 and 1939.

The Red team opens its season next year against Colgate Oct. 1, and winds up against Pennsylvania on November 24, according to an announcement issued by the school.

Harvard returns to Cornell's schedule in 1938 with an Oct. 8 date. Yale and Princeton, 1937 opponents, will be missing.

The schedules:

1938—Oct. 1, Colgate; 8, Harvard at Cambridge; 15, Syracuse at Syracuse; 22, Pennsylvania State; 29, Columbia at New York; Nov. 5, pending; 12, Dartmouth; 24 Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.

1939—Oct. 7, Syracuse; 14, Princeton at Princeton; 21, Penn State; 28, Ohio State at Columbus; Nov. 4, Columbia; 11, Colgate; 18, Dartmouth at Hanover; 30, Pennsylvania at Philadelphia.

A three-regatta schedule was announced Wednesday for the Cornell crews, beginning with Navy at Annapolis on April 20, and following with Harvard, MIT and Syracuse at Cambridge on May 14, and Yale and Princeton on Lake Cayuga here on May 21 and 22. The last named regatta for the Carnegie Cup, will be rowed Friday, May 21, if weather conditions permit. Otherwise, it will be rowed either in the morning or afternoon of the following day.

AHS and CFA Play Basketball Here Dec. 1

Addison High School basketeers are planning an ambitious season under the tutelage of Coach William Miller. The season will be well under way by Christmas when the League season opens and the boys will have several games of experience before the formal opening.

Corning Free Academy has been booked for the opening game. While the locals are going out of their class in attacking a team of the calibre of Corning, a good game is assured. The contest will be played on the Addison high school court Wednesday night, December 1 and will mark the opening game on the year's schedule.

In past years Addison teams played Corning in regular games in the league and often played the big city boys to a stand still. However, in recent years the Corning coaches have had more material and the distance some of the local squad members have to come have mitigated against the locals making a showing against their competitors from C. F. A.

A hushed silence and a feeling of shame pervaded the Addison High School auditorium last Friday morning when Principal Gladstone hinted at the mental age of the assembly group as evidenced in their actions at the two recent high school functions.

The preacher saith. I hope that many of my readers will stop and think what the real meaning of Thanksgiving is. In the first place this is our oldest national holiday. It is exclusively American in character. But the original Thanksgiving was given by liberty-loving people who desired to worship God in their own way.

—o—

They did not care for the pomp and ceremony of kings and emperors. They chose the harder way. The open woods, danger from the Indians in an unknown land. And they knelt in Thanksgiving in cold churches and prayed. Prayed to their God, thanking Him for favors. And in the light of modern inventions and science and learning we call that life crude.

—o—

But they were thankful and God spared them many trials to enable them to carry on in order that we might have the things we enjoy today. What I'm trying to get at is that we should kneel and pray to our God at some time during the day and thank Him for sparing us from some of the things that are devastating the world today and to thank him for the benefits we do enjoy.

—o—

And as Pollyanna said: "No matter how bad off we are someone is worse". And I'm sure if you can find someone to do some good for on Thanksgiving, the day will be even better for you.

STATE OF NEW YORK
DEPARTMENT OF TAXATION AND FINANCE
STATE TRAFFIC COMMISSION

Albany, N. Y., November 22, 1937

A campaign to inform motorists of the importance of heeding highway signs and markers were launched today by the New York State Traffic Commission.

Speaking on behalf of the Commission, Chairman Charles A. Harnett pointed out while drivers obey signal lights, they fail to give proper consideration to signs and markers on state roads.

"We believe the majority of drivers are unaware of the seriousness of disregarding these signs," the Commissioner said. "It is clearly understood that failure to obey traffic signal lights or police instructions results in fine or punishment, but little has been said concerning the penalty for ignoring signs and markers on state highways. There is a penalty however resulting in a fine of fifty dollars or thirty days imprisonment."

At the present time, the Commission consisting of the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles, the Superintendent of State Police and the Commissioner of Highways may order the erection of all signs, signals and markers on the state highway system. All signs erected previous to the formation of the Commission on September 1, 1936, have been legalized through appropriate resolution.

In their program to reduce highway accidents, the Commission is carrying on a continuous survey to determine the most effective means of controlling accident-prone locations.

At certain dangerous state road intersections, the Commission has ordered the erection of traffic signal lights centrally suspended over the highway. These lights control traffic only at the intersection at which they are located.

At other intersections, the use of "STOP" signs has been deemed more advisable. These signs require drivers to bring their vehicles to a full stop before proceeding, and failure to do so is punishable by fine or imprisonment.

Red flashing signal lights having an illuminated sign attached and bearing the words "STOP THEN GO" have been established and necessitate a stop at the light. Amber flashing signals with a "CAUTION—SLOW" sign affixed require motorists to proceed with caution.

Speed zones have been erected on stretches of highway demanding reduced speeds and require motorists to slow down to the stated speed within the area of these signs. All zone signs will be marked with reflector signs as to be clearly visible at night.

Attention was called to the white markers used in dividing many state highways to facilitate an easy flow of traffic. Motorists were reminded that violations occurring on or at these white lines are classified as reckless driving and summonses or arrests are made on that charge.

It was further pointed out that many "SLOW" signs now existing on the highways may be replaced in certain localities by definite zone signs.. These will state the rate of speed authorized by the Commission and will be marked with reflector signs.

At the same time, Commissioner Harnett made it plain that signs previously erected and legalized by the Commission will be removed if they are found to be of no use.

A definite period will be granted motorists to become familiar with new signs and markers before police authorities are instructed to make arrests for failure to obey them.

Commission members were unanimous in their belief that strict observance of these signs and markers would tend to reduce the number of automobile accidents occurring on state highways.

Cornell Meets Pennsylvania in Traditional Game Thanksgiving

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 19—The Cornell football team took a single day's rest after the muddy struggle at Dartmouth last week-end and began heavy work Tuesday for the Pennsylvania game Thanksgiving Day.

The meeting this year will be the 44th in one of the oldest gridiron series in the nation. Only the Princeton-Yale rivalry outranks the traditional Thanksgiving Day clash in continuity, length and sustained interest, and the game has become known as one of the most colorful and exciting events in Eastern football.

The first game of the series was a 50-0 victory for Penn in 1893. The series has been uninterrupted since that time, with Penn holding a margin of 31 victories to 10 for Cornell with 2 ties.

Cornell did not win a victory in the series until the great Red team of 1901 beat Penn 23-6. And Penn was one of the only two teams scoring on Cornell that season. The 1902 game was one of the most exciting in the series.

Captain and all-American W. J. Warner, brother of "Pop" Warner, led the Big Red in an unsuccessful assault on Franklin Field which ended 12-11 for Penn. Cornell did not win again until 1913 when a series of three Red victories began.

Cornell's last victory in the traditional battle was in 1933 when the Red won 20-12. Carl Snavely's sophomores lost a hard 14-6 game last year.

The Series:

Addison Town Team Enters NYP League

Addison basketball fans will have an opportunity to see the Addison Town Team, hereafter to be known as the Addison Merchants, in action in a league. An active league has been formed of teams in the southern Tier zone of New York and northern Pennsylvania. There will be eight teams in the league. Those towns which will present competing teams will be: Wellsburg, Columbia Crossroads, Sayre, Westfield, Elkland, St. Casimer's and the Elmira Black Hawks, both of the last named teams being from Elmira and Addison.

Preliminary plans for the opening of the league were made at a meeting held in Elmira Thursday night. Games will be played on a home and home basis. The season will be divided into two sections with the winners of the first section playing the winners of the second section in a playoff for the league championship.

Those from Addison who attended the organization meeting were Maurice Robbins, manager of the Merchants, John Grange, Maynard Allen and William Wilson. Each team pays an entrance fee of $10 in the league and in case of failure to show up for a game a forfeiture fee of $5 must be paid within 24 hours or the team loses its franchise in the league.

The opening game for Addison will be in Addison December 6 against the Sayre five.

Can It Happen Here?

When President Roosevelt was in Brazil a few months ago he delivered an address before the Brazilian Senate, Chamber of Deputies and the Supreme Court. That evening at a great state dinner President Roosevelt, toasting President Vargas, lifted his glass and said:

"I am leaving you tonight with great regret. There is one thing, however, that I shall remember, and that is that there were two people who invented the New Deal—the President of Brazil and the President of the United States".

Last week Vargas proclaimed himself dictator of Brazil and abolished the Senate, Chamber of Deputies and Supreme Court. It happened in Brazil.

Can it happen here?

Cornell in Top Shape For Big Game With Pennsylvania

ITHACA, N. Y. Nov. 22—Cornell's Big Red team, unhampered by injuries, will meet Pennsylvania in the 44th annual edition of the Franklin Field football classic on Thanksgiving Day.

Although snow and cold weather have slowed the practice sessions in preparation for the meeting, Coach Carl Snavely's outfit will be in top shape for the encounter and pointing for the first victory in the series since the Red won 20-12 in 1933.

The Cornell eleven has been working hard all week, spurred by the prediction of Coach Harvey Harman of Penn that the Quakers would emerge victorious.

Snavely, expecting the Penn team to be at full strength for Cornell, is looking for the toughest game on the schedule; but he makes no predications. He says, "Our boys will be ready for any eventuality; and if we are to be beaten, all I can say is that Pennsylvania will know it has been in a ball game.

The Big Red line will be ready to start at full strength, with a group of veterans, averaging 190 pounds, pointed to stop the Penn offensive. The backfield will probably depend on a combination of sophomores and juniors, with yearlings Whit Baker, Ken Brown, and Vince Eichler working with lettermen Bob Rose and George Peck.

The regulars will be well backed by a strong squad of reserves for each position. Alex Burke and Norm French, a pair of sophomores ends, will be ready to fill in at the flank posts, Phil Tuths and Curt Lafey will be set for the tackle jobs, and Jack Hemingway and Jim Rutledge will be ready for action in the guard posts.

In the backfield each position is well backed with veterans Bob Meagher and Lou Grossman at the blocking back position, and Bob White, Dick Morgan, Whitey Nelson, Bob Boochever, and Red Moulton important running backs on the squad of 33 men which will leave Ithaca Wednesday noon for the traditional battle.

Milk money... is HOME TOWN money

Steady circulation of milk money means steady business in a dairy community.

Milk money flows back into the community to the dairy farmers and to the men at the milk plant. It then circulates to the local storekeepers, the doctor, the dentist, and other home town people. It helps support schools, libraries, churches, hospitals, fire and police departments, and other home institutions.

It is Borden's job and Borden's privilege to contribute to this steady circulation of milk money by building new markets and bigger markets for milk and its products.

THANKSGIVING DAY

The Last Thursday in November

Of all the holidays observed in this country, there is none so distinctively American as Thanksgiving. It is a legacy of the Pilgrims, cherished because of the romance and traditions that surrounded it.

Thanksgiving is observed by church services, by feasting, games and general festivity.

The day has long been recognized as one of the greatest home festivals of the year and a day of family reunions.

First Snow Brings Fun for Kiddies

The first heavy snow of the year arrived during the past week and with it brought cold weather, winter clothes, sleds, skiis and snowballs for the kids.

The first snowshoer was seen Sunday afternoon in Front street. The going was rather tough but she managed to wade along with the wide and long shoes. And a skiing young lady also appeared on the same thoroughfare during the same afternoon. She found the going somewhat easier and managed to glide along, although somewhat hard, over the top of the thin snow.

Good snowshoeing and skiing will not come until there is plenty of snow, a good thaw and then a freeze to put a crust on the top of the snow. It is the crust which makes these sports thrilling.

Recreational Schools Planned for Leaders

A second series of schools in recreational leadership have been planned for the winter in answer to the request of leaders who attended a similar group of schools sponsored last winter by the Steuben County Home Bureau. Schools will be in charge of William M. Smith of the Department of Rural Social Organizations at the State College of Agriculture at Cornell University. Each school will be repeated in two different centers in the county for the greater convenience of those who plan to attend. The first meeting is scheduled for Thursday, December 9 and repeated on Friday, December 10. Places of the meetings will be announced next week. Meetings will begin at ten A. M. and Mr. Smith plans to dismiss between 3:00 and 4:00 P. M. Dates for the remaining meetings are January 12 and 13 and February 7 and 8.

The schools are planned to be of special help to men and women who act as leaders of groups for whom recreational meetings have to be planned and carried on. Since it is difficult to arrange to send invitations to every organization in the county which might be interested in sending a leader to these schools it is hoped that this newspaper article will serve as an invitation. Anyone planning to attend the first school should drop a card to the Home Bureau office at Bath so that they may be notified of final details in regard to the meetings. Last year organizations represented at the schools included subordinate and juvenile Granges, church and Sunday school classes, Parent-Teacher Associations, and several fraternal organizations, as well as Home Bureau units. With the lessons being given in two centers this year instead of one it should be possible for more leaders to attend.

Low Income Families Own 60% of All Autos

WASHINGTON (IPS)— Families having incomes of less than $2,000 a year own 60 per cent of all automobiles and 40 per cent of all mechanical refrigerators in use in America, the Department of Commerce reports.

The department's report was made after a detailed study of living standards in American homes. The findings were based on a study of cross-section groups of families in fifty cities throughout the United States.

AVON THEATRE

The Avon Theatre will run a continuous show on Thanksgiving Day from two-thirty in the afternoon until eleven-thirty in the evening. The picture features the big-mouthed fellow who makes you laugh every minute, Joe E. Brown in "Riding on Air", one of the best comedy pictures he has ever made. So if you wish to laugh and have a good time, do not miss this picture.

On Saturday only one of the finest football pictures ever shown on any screen will be presented. It shows you the eight all-American stars in a play that made them famous, it is "The Big Game" with Philip Huston, Andy DeVine, James Gleason, June Travis and Bruce Cabot, besides the eight all-American stars.

Sunday and Monday, November 29 and 30, the management of the Avon, is bringing to you the dramatic home-coming of the country doctor's $3,000 grown-up babies, the Dionne, Quintuplets in "Reunion" starring with them Jean Hersholt, Rochelle Hudson, Slim Summerville, Helen Vinson and Robert Kent. This is a great picture for the entire family to see. There will be a matinee on Sunday so bring the kiddies and see this great picture.

The Senate Agriculture Committee completed a bill at mid-night Sunday which disregarded all limits as to cost. Committee members estimated the bill would increase the present yearly cost of farm aid from half a billion dollars to between 650 and 800 millions. Democratic leaders welcomed the bill as the first item on the President's special program.

Thanksgiving Will Be Observed Quietly in Addison and Vicinity

Most of the local residents plan home dinners—Few will take to the road to visit friends and relatives—Union church service in Presbyterian Church in morning.

There will be no formal observance of Thanksgiving in Addison this season. The only untoward event on the day's calendar will be the Union Church service at 10 o'clock Thursday morning in the Presbyterian Church under the direction of the Rev. John V. Axtell.

Many of the faculty of the Addison High School will leave for their homes to observe the day. Others will make long awaited trips to visit with friends or to places of interest.

Tourist traffic through Addison is expected to reach a high peak for this year, providing the weather Man provides decent roads. Rural residents will have large influx of their city relatives and friends for the day and many a farm table in this vicinity is expected to carry more than its regular burden of food.

Other groups will join in dinners in hotels and inns in Addison and vicinity.

Many shut-ins will be unable to be about during the day and will have their meals served to them on a tray, made up of viands from the dining room and kitchen tables.

Thanksgiving time is a reunion time for many families when the children and the grand children come home to spend the day with one set of grandparents and then will spend Christmas with the other grandparents or parents.

Thanksgiving is the oldest truly American holiday. It originated here and remains here. It has no equal or like in any other country on the face of the globe. It is a national holiday when all legal business is suspended. Most Addison stores will be closed throughout the day to enable employes to go to their homes or the homes of friends for the day.

Addisonites are not bothered by the football bug in that it will take them from the warmth of their own firesides to witness games. However, alumni and friends of Cornell are expected to listen to the Pennsylvania-Cornell game which will be on the air from several stations

There will be no mail delivery Thursday, schools will close for the balance of the week and a Sunday appearance will pervade Main Street.

It is well in a story of this type to remind Mr. and Mrs. and Miss Motorist of the number of people killed and maimed each holiday by the so-called "Sunday driver" and the speedy and careless driver. A few minutes more getting to the destination will not be missed in the long run, but an accident will cost time, money and maybe life or permanent injuries.

Manager Walter Smith of the Avon Theater has planned a continuous show for the patrons throughout the day from 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon until 11 at night.

And in no other country are the typical American foods of turkey, cranberry and pumpkin served on a festive day. The average American dinner on Thanksgiving Day usually consists of: turkey or chicken or duck and some even have a good roast of pork, mashed potatoes, biscuits, cranberry sauces, squash, pumpkin or mince pie and old American cheese and tea or coffee.

To some people in the community Thanksgiving will be just another day in the week, for they will not have all the viands mentioned above And many men will be regularly employed on the usual daily duties as such as soft drink parlors attendants, filling station operators, hotel men, railroad men, bakers, milk men and the like.
